

LINES : Design Stories

The Design Stories group has a broad interest in narrative and storytelling which incorporates process, practise and structure. We are interested in how and why we tell stories in and through visual and material culture. We would like to develop a multi-disciplinary approach to research with perceived outputs in talks, workshops, collaborative research and eventually new courses.

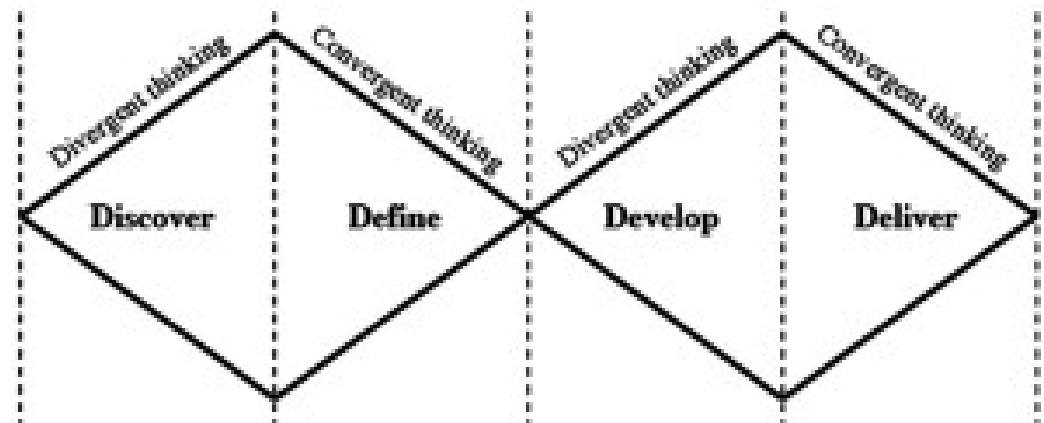

Dr Nichola Dobson
Edward Hollis
Harvey Dingwall
Shirley Mclauchlan
Lindy Richardson
Jared Taylor
Michael Windle

Innovative sharing of Design Practice

The Story telling around through and beyond the Design Process

Double diamond thinking, Design Council.. Source:
<http://journal.frontiersin.org/Journal/10.3389/fnhum.2013.00656/full>

Something I did
Something I found out
Something I saw.

Invited speaker - Alys Scott-Hawkins
A LETTER TO MY PROJECT

Her paper 'A Letter to my Project' describes some of the challenges of the Bedford Place Map, a recent participatory project. Asking questions directly addressed to the project open up discussion about the relationships we all have with our work and what we learn from things which do not turn out as planned.