

Emily Nixon

Emily Nixon's work is a real inspiration for me as she, like me, is heavily influenced by the natural world. She is particularly intrigued by the organic forms she comes across where she lives, on the coast of Cornwall. I think her design influences really come through in her work, specifically through the textures and shapes of her pieces. I love her ability to show her influences proudly within her work, but not so much so that the wearer couldn't make their own speculations about the piece. I think it is important for jewellery to show the personality of the designer as well as being something of value only to the wearer.
