

Chat & Doodle : Week 2

Drawing Challenge

For this exercise, I was talking to a friend from the class for about half an hour, and I was doodling as we talked. The image below is the result of this activity.

What's really interesting and actually surprised me is how many links there were between the conversation and drawing. Firstly, at times when the conversation turned to small talk I did more intricate doodles, but during more interesting conversation I reverted to very simple forms. It's also interesting to see for example how when the conversation got to a topic that annoyed me, I switched to more messy, somewhat aggressive scribbles.

