

Spheres, From 2D to 3D : Week 6 Drawing Challenge

For this week's drawing challenge, I started with a little testing, looking at the example drawings and figuring out how the shading worked. This was important as I'd never drawn a sphere before, and I wanted to do this right.

I'm really happy I did this test, and at this point I felt confident enough to try and do this. My results took a bit of a cartoony spin, which I really like and fits my style more. I also liked the idea of working with color, as it allowed for each sphere to have more character.

I maybe played with shading, color and shape more than I did with texture, however it was my first time drawing spheres I'm still really happy with how it turned out.
