

Week 9 improvements on Collage story board

This storytelling version is about what I experience on my runs and I wanted to express the environment and what is happening in terms of hearing, seeing and touching. Located at the Water Leith visitor centre.

The first one expresses the location of my morning run, surrounded by greenery and with seagulls chirping. The second conveys a cat I saw on the road attempting to catch this pigeon, which went from what would have been an outward flight to hiding back in its hole. The score contains bird cries, the movement of the pigeon.

The third one expresses me going deeper towards a forest-like area, with the flying seagulls still behind me. When I ran to a place, the puddles of water on the ground shone out my shadow as it had just rained, and after just a few steps, the wet mud covered my shoes.

The fourth one shows a lone dog I saw during my run, he seemed to be looking for something and I followed him to find that he was so eager because he was looking for his owner, a guide dog. I applied the score of the quiet environment I drew earlier to represent the weather and the grass, using a collage of images to convey what was happening
