

Working as a student

All work and no play? Student Ambassador Jack looks at working as a student

At times, it can be a tricky balancing act but I've benefited greatly from getting a glimpse into the world of work; from stepping into a completely different environment to University study, doing something I enjoy whilst gaining different skills from those I might develop at University.

I think I am in an incredibly fortunate position. I'm able to study full-time at a thriving, diverse university, with all the extracurricular and social opportunities that offers, but also work at one of Edinburgh's busiest tourist attractions.

I work at the Royal Yacht Britannia as a Sales Assistant overseeing ticket sales and working in the gift shop. Every week during term I'm able to work just one day and then work practically full-time over summer, so from that point of view I've been very lucky to have a supportive and flexible employer who has been able to offer me this contract.

It's fantastic to work with the public alongside a highly engaged customer service team, and it's also widened my social group outwith University. I love representing my city – of which I am extraordinarily proud – by working in the tourist industry.

To any student who is thinking about what it is like working and studying, I would say it is certainly testing. There have been weeks when I have found it tough, juggling deadlines and shifts – University is hard enough and any job is a big commitment. But I think it's challenged me to be more prepared and organised, not least when it comes to good time management – a vital skill in any workplace – and I've become a more rounded and experienced individual for it. I would very much encourage you to consider whether a wee job on the side could be beneficial to you – if nothing else, it's some extra cash for us poor students!
